Benefits of Joining

There are many benefits to becoming a member of a fraternity or sorority. Among all organizations in the fraternity and sorority community, shared values inform the following benefits of membership.

Personal Growth and Development

Fraternities and sororities participate in various experiences that promote exploration of life passions and career readiness. Chapters report that over 52% of members are involved in at least one other student organization on campus, and 20% of members serve in a leadership role on campus!

Learning and Academic Support

Fraternity and sorority members are more likely to maintain a higher GPA and graduate on time compared to unaffiliated students. Many fraternities and sororities offer study sessions, mentor programs, and scholastic accountability.

Check fsl.colostate.edu for community and chapter grade reports.

What's In It For You?

Giving Back

A shared value among all fraternities and sororities is doing good in the community and engaging with social issues. Fraternities and sororities recognize the privilege and power of a college education and believe in giving back to their community.

In the past year the fraternity and sorority community contributed $160,611.50 dollars to local and national charitable organizations and provided 36,000 hours of service to CSU and northern Colorado.

Community of Support

Approximately 2,900 students are members of fraternities and sororities at CSU, with chances to connect with other affiliated students in the classroom, on the intramural fields, and across campus year-round.

Joining a fraternity or sorority provides a home away from home; an opportunity to build a small community of brothers or sisters out of CSU's large student population.

Ask the chapter(s) you're interested in about expectations of membership before joining. All groups should be able to articulate their minimum requirements for members.

Membership Expectations

All fraternities and sororities have expectations of their members and potential members, and those expectations vary from chapter to chapter. Chapters should clearly communicate expectations to you before and after you join, so ask as many questions as you can!

Academics

All members of fraternities and sororities are, first and foremost, CSU students. Each chapter honors this reality with minimum GPA requirements to join and remain a member in good standing.

Behavior and Conduct

As representatives of individual chapters and the fraternity and sorority community, members of fraternities and sororities are expected to follow organizational, community, and CSU policies and guidelines.

Do your research: visit fsl.colostate.edu to view detailed information about each fraternity and sorority. This includes information about academic performance, organizational values, number of service hours completed, and organizational conduct history.

Time Commitment

In fraternities and sororities, the time invested in the organization is largely up to the experience the individual member desires. Weekly meetings, chapter workshops, service activities, and social events are just some of the many ways members spend time in their organization.

Financial Commitment

Chapter dues can range from $150 to over two thousand dollars in a semester, and are determined by individual chapters. Higher dues for some organizations may be connected to live-in requirements (housing).

Detailed finance & facility information is available under the Future Members tab at fsl.colostate.edu.

15 Facts

about Fraternities & Sororities

Fraternities and sororities have been present in the United States since the country's founding in 1776.

Fraternities and sororities have been recognized at Colorado State University for over 100 years.

Greek-lettered organizations were created to help students on college campuses engage in lifelong learning and get involved outside of the classroom.

Fraternities and sororities offer opportunities that encourage values-based living and personal growth and development.

All organizations at CSU are either regional, national, or international in scope.

Some fraternities and sororities were created to center a specific culture, identity, interest, or professional focus. These organizations are referred to as interest and identity-specific chapters.

Some fraternities and sororities at CSU have facilities where members live together, though most do not.

A U.S. government study shows that fraternity and sorority members are more likely to graduate than their counterparts who are not in fraternities and sororities. This is also true at CSU.

The first sorority was founded in 1867.

10

African American Greek letter organizations have been in existence since 1902.

11

The emergence of culturally-based fraternities and sororities occurred in 1975, centering Latinx, Asian, and multicultural experiences, among others.

12

There are about 3000 fraternity and sorority members at CSU making up about 13.5% of the CSU undergraduate population.

13

The CSU fraternity and sorority community includes over 50 unique chapters.

14

Each chapter has important symbols and insignia.

15

Some organizations have performance traditions like stepping and strolling.

Interest & Identity-Specific Chapters

Fraternities and sororities develop leaders in the community and help students along their college journey. One of the most positive aspects of these organizations is the opportunity to connect with diverse individuals that challenge members to think differently and gain new perspectives. At CSU there are a wide array of interest and identity-specific fraternities and sororities in which students can unite with individuals connecting around a common interest, identity, or purpose.

Some of our chapters are focused in a particular area of study, including agriculture, business, engineering, and music. Some organizations center specific identities including faith/religion, culture, or race/ethnicity.

If your interests aren't represented in your exploration of our fraternities and sororities, the opportunity to develop new organizations in fraternity and sorority life at CSU may interest you. Feel free to contact any staff member in the Office of Fraternity and Sorority Life for more information.

Interfraternity Council | (IFC)

The Interfraternity Council is the governing council for men's social fraternities. IFC includes 23 fraternities.

Multicultural Greek Council | (MGC)

The Multicultural Greek Council is the home for culturally-based fraternities and sororities. There are currently six fraternities and seven sororities.

National Pan-Hellenic Council | (NPHC)

The National Pan-Hellenic Council is the council for historically Black/African-American fraternities and sororities. NPHC nationally is comprised of five fraternities and four sororities, and CSU's NPHC currently recognizes three fraternities and two sororities.

Panhellenic Association | (PHA)

The Panhellenic Association is the governing council for women's social sororities. Panhellenic has 10 sororities.

Professional Fraternity Council | (PFC)

The Professional Fraternity Council is the governing council for professionally focused and interest based fraternities and sororities. PFC has two all-gender fraternities and two sororities.

Interfraternity Council

The Interfraternity Council (IFC) is home to CSU's social fraternities for men. As a community, IFC strives to promote and foster an environment that works toward a devotion to service, scholarship, leadership, and brotherhood. IFC's aim is to create a prosperous environment in which men can grow and thrive throughout their collegiate experience. We believe a great fraternity experience is waiting for you.

Multicultural Greek Council

The Multicultural Greek Council is comprised of 13 culturally-based fraternities and sororities. The MGC community embraces cultural diversity and welcomes students of any identity.

MGC chapters center the experiences of Asian, Latino/a and multicultural identities and ancestries. While organizations are culturally based, anyone is welcome to join!

To see MGC in action, check out the community calendar at http://fsl.colostate.edu/calendar for opportunities to engage with us. The best way to learn about MGC is to meet members. Stay on the lookout for upcoming events!

National Pan-Hellenic Council

The National Pan-Hellenic Council, also known as NPHC, is the governing body for the historically Black fraternities and sororities on campus. On a national level, there are nine fraternities and sororities that comprise the National Pan-Hellenic Council. They are traditionally referred to as the "Divine Nine." While the National Pan-Hellenic Council does not partake in a formal recruitment process every semester, students can still join an organization after the completion of some college credit when an NPHC organization is conducting an intake process.

The National Pan-Hellenic Council promotes academic achievement, leadership development, health and wellness, and civic engagement. Organizations want to be an advocate for people who identify with or are in support of the African American community. NPHC organizations often collaborate with the Black/African American Cultural Center and its affiliated student organizations on programs and events.

NPHC Organizations

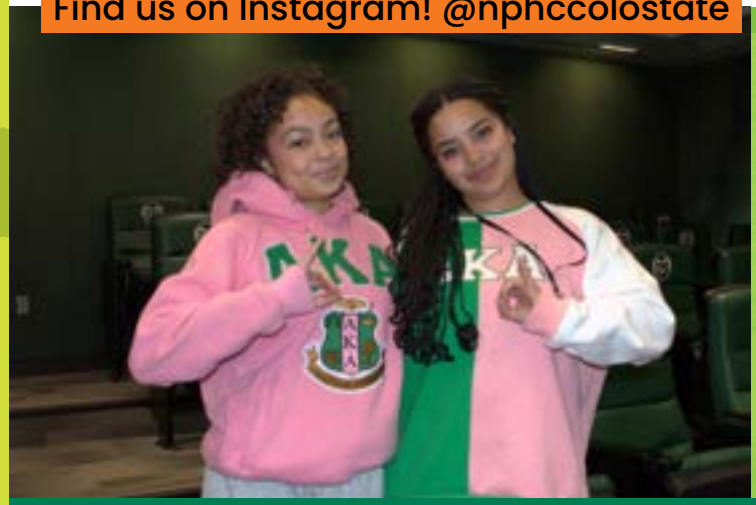

There are nine organizations in the National Pan-Hellenic Council. Those in bold are currently considered active by CSU.

For more information about how to join an NPHC chapter, turn to page 33.

The National Panhellenic Conference chapters listed below all participate in primary recruitment (or "rush"). The associate chapters participate in a more informal recruitment process each semester.

Panhellenic Association

The Panhellenic Association, also known as PHA, is composed of ten sororities, eight of which are member chapters of the National Panhellenic Conference. Two of the ten chapters are considered interest or identity-specific chapters and are associate members of the council.

Members of Panhellenic chapters have the opportunity to experience standards of excellence in scholarship, service, and leadership. The Panhellenic Association is dedicated to providing meaningful experiences for its members including service opportunities, academic workshops and study groups, and positional leadership opportunities. All members are highly encouraged to join other organizations on campus. The Panhellenic community helps make the larger campus of CSU feel smaller. PHA creates a large network of highly intelligent, philanthropic, and dedicated members, intent on making life-long friendships and connections.

Professional Fraternity Council

The Professional Fraternity Council, commonly known as PFC, exists to promote and enhance professional, service, and scholarly based fraternities and sororities at Colorado State University. Check the fraternity and sorority life calendar and website at www.fsl.colostate.edu for upcoming PFC events and additional information about individual chapter recruitment events.

Most PFC chapters host recruitment events each semester. It is important to note that most organizations in this council allow for dual membership, which means an individual may join both a social fraternity or sorority in one of the other four councils and be a member of a professional organization in PFC.

How to Join our Community

Students interested in joining a fraternity or sorority should start by doing some research to determine the type of organization in which they are interested. Each organization offers a different experience and may have additional requirements or expectations to join.

Additional information is available at fsl.colostate.edu.

Visit our website: fsl.colostate.edu to complete the interested in joining form and learn more about our community.

How to Join IFC

Interfraternity Council

While Interfraternity Council (IFC) fraternities encourage recruitment 365 days a year, chapters in this council host a more organized recruitment effort in the first few weeks of each semester. A great way to learn more and get connected with an IFC fraternity is to register for IFC recruitment via the link at fsl.colostate.edu.

Attend the Recruitment Info Session on Thursday, September 4, 2025 at 5pm in Engineering 100 to learn more about fraternity recruitment. Please register for recruitment and view the recruitment calendar at:

fsl.colostate.edu/future-members/council/join-interfraternity-council-ifc

To learn more about the IFC recruitment process and find a complete recruitment calendar view the Join the Interfraternity Council (IFC) page under the Future Members tab on the FSL website.

How To Join MGC

Multicultural Greek Council

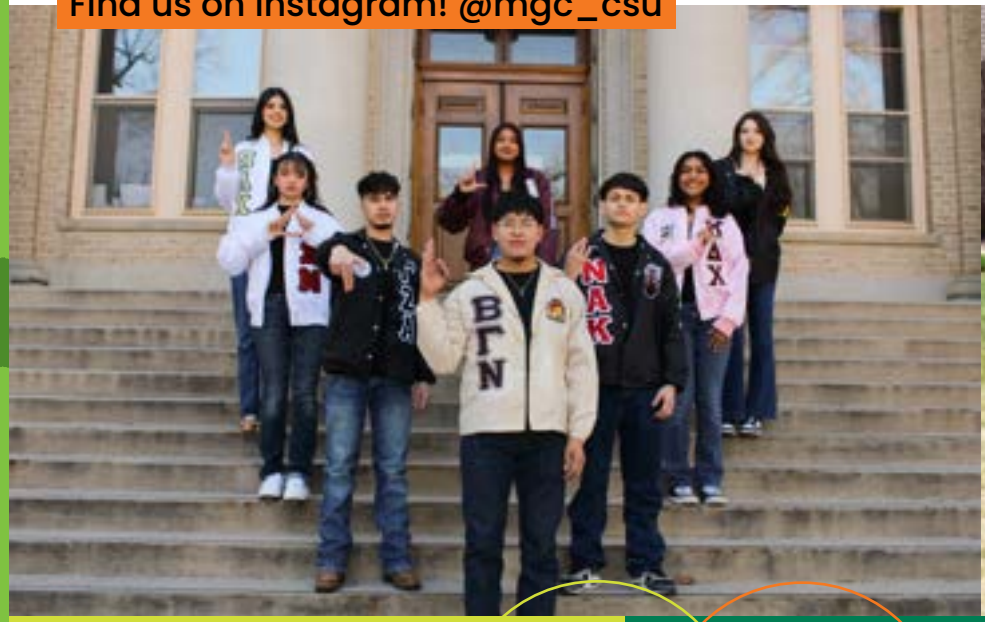

In the Multicultural Greek Council (MGC) students are often recruited by friends in a fraternity or sorority. Each organization generally hosts a week full of public events and informational meetings so that potential new members can learn more about the organization, meet members of the chapter, and see if that fraternity or sorority is a good fit. Some chapters require a certain amount of academic credits be completed before joining, and encourage joining after completing at least one semester at CSU (or another campus if a transfer student).

Learn more about MGC by attending the MGC Meet & Greet on Wednesday, September 17, 2025, from 12-2pm on the LSC Plaza.

Save the date for Rooted in Culture on Friday, October 24, 2025, 5:30pm in the LSC Theatre. This event is a great opportunity for MGC chapters to showcase their organizations.

To learn more about the MGC recruitment/intake process view the Join the Multicultural Greek Council (MGC) page under the Future Members tab on the FSL website.

Find us on Instagram! @mgc_csu

How To Join NPHC

National Pan-Hellenic Council

In the National Pan-Hellenic Council (NPHC), the process to join is a little more structured. Interested students are encouraged to do research about the organization they would like to join, whether they are currently active at CSU or not. NPHC chapters often require that candidates attend informational meetings, complete an application, attend a formal interview, and attend educational meetings.

The easiest way to get connected to one of these organizations is to reach out to the Office of Fraternity and Sorority Life at CSU to learn about upcoming events and opportunities to express interest in NPHC organizations.

If you are interested in connecting with NPHC organizations, join B/AACC at their Open House on Friday, August 22, 2025 at 3p.m. in the B/AACC Office or attend the B/AACC BBQ on Thursday, September 4, 2025.

To learn more about the NPHC recruitment/intake process view the Join the National Pan-Hellenic Council (NPHC) page under the Future Members tab on the FSL website.

How To Join Panhellenic

Panhellenic Association

In the Panhellenic Association (PHA) there are two different types of recruitment. Eight chapters participate in a primary recruitment process (often called "rush") held this year September 13-26, 2025. Primary recruitment is designed to introduce potential new members to all the chapters and for the sororities to learn more about each student. The two interest specific chapters of the Panhellenic Association hold informal recruitment efforts each semester that vary by chapter.

Students interested in primary recruitment need to register on the fraternity and sorority life website. More information about all types of Panhellenic recruitment is available at fsl.colostate.edu.

To learn more about the PHA recruitment process view the Join the Panhellenic Association (PHA) page under the Future Members tab on the FSL website.

Find us on Instagram! @csupanhellenic

How To Join PFC

Professional Fraternity Council

Recruitment in the Professional Fraternity Council (PFC) varies from organization to organization. Each chapter generally hosts public events and informational meetings so potential new members can learn more about the organization, meet members of the chapter, and see if that fraternity or sorority is a good fit.

Some chapters require potential members to have a declared major in a particular field of study (for example agriculture or business), while other chapters welcome members from a variety of majors, but with a particular interest (like law or music). It is important to note that most PFC chapters allow members to have dual membership in sororities or fraternities from another council.

To learn more about the PFC recruitment process view the Join the Professional Fraternity Council (PFC) page under the Future Members tab on the FSL website.

Voices from the Community

What advice would you give to someone nervous about going through recruitment?

I'd say don't put too much pressure on yourself to be anything but you. It's totally normal to feel nervous everyone does but recruitment is really about finding a group where you feel comfortable and can be yourself. Go in with an open mind, trust the process, and remember that you're also deciding if it's the right fit for you, not just the other way around. Some of the best connections come when you're relaxed and just being genuine. (Scott Green, Sigma Phi Epsilon)

My biggest advice is to show up with an open mind and really give it a chance. Go to the events, have conversations, and explore what each organization is about. You never truly know how well a sorority or fraternity might fit you until you experience it for yourself. You might be surprised by how welcomed and supported you feel. (Adriana Gallegos Helguera, Kappa Delta Chi Sorority, Inc.)

My biggest piece of advice is to be yourself and trust the process. It's normal to feel nervous—everyone does—but recruitment is really just about finding a place where you feel comfortable and supported. Go into each conversation with an open mind and focus on how each chapter makes you feel, not just what you think they want to hear. And remember, the women you're talking to were in your shoes once too—they get it, and they genuinely want to get to know you. You don't have to be perfect or have it all figured out. Just show up as your authentic self, and the right place will find you. (Kara Lisi, Gamma Phi Beta)

How has joining your chapter impacted your college experience?

Joining my chapter has completely transformed my college experience in the best way possible. It has provided me with lifelong friendships and connected me with people from all across the CSU community—including fellow students, faculty, and staff. These relationships have given me a strong sense of belonging and support that I truly value. Through my chapter, I've also had the opportunity to take on meaningful leadership roles—not only within my fraternity, but also through the Interfraternity Council. These experiences have challenged me, helped me grow, and given me the confidence and skills I'll carry with me well beyond college. Looking back, I honestly can't imagine what my college journey would have been like without Fraternity & Sorority Life. It has shaped who I am today and made my time at CSU more rewarding, purposeful, and connected. (Ethan Bush, Phi Delta Theta)

Joining Gamma Phi Beta at CSU has genuinely changed my life in every way possible. I've noticed a shift in my confidence, my ability to lead, and the way I show up for others and myself. Being surrounded by such a strong, inspiring group of women has pushed me to grow into the best version of myself—academically, socially, and personally. Gamma Phi has given me a community that celebrates my successes, supports me through challenges, and constantly reminds me that I'm never doing college alone. It's hard to imagine what my college experience would've looked like without it, and thank goodness I never have to. (Ella Davis, Gamma Phi Beta)

Joining my chapter has completely shaped my college experience. It has supported me in not feeling less alone, being someone who had zero connections coming into CSU I was able to find my community with individuals who will love and appreciate me for who I am. (Kelly Su, Alpha Phi Gamma National Sorority Inc.)

What do you wish you knew before joining FSL?

I wish I knew that I wasn't just my chapter, but a whole community of fraternities and sororities. (Carter Hickerson, Lambda Chi Alpha)

One thing that I wished I knew before joining FSL is that there are so many different type of organization that are offered, some that even have specific interests based around them. Additionally, just because you might not be in the same organization as someone does not mean that you can not still be great friends with them. (Marlena Bevilacqua, Zeta Tau Alpha)

I wish I knew how much I would miss all the small events and times spent with my sisters. Now that I am graduating I wish I had thrown myself into more events with a more present mind and really appreciated the time I spent in my chapter more. (Anna Higgins, Kappa Delta)

I wish I had known just how committed Fraternity & Sorority Life is to academic success. There's a strong support system in place—from study hours to peer accountability—that really helps you stay on track and push yourself to do well. (Adriana Gallegos Helguera, Kappa Delta Chi Sorority, Inc.)

What is the most unexpected benefit of joining a Fraternity or Sorority?

The most unexpected benefit for me was how much personal growth came from leadership opportunities. I thought I'd just be gaining friends, but I ended up learning how to manage events, lead meetings, navigate tough conversations, and really step into a version of myself I didn't know I was capable of becoming. (Dimitry Volchansky, Beta Theta Pi)

One of the most unexpected benefits of joining a fraternity has been the leadership experience I've gained. When I first joined, I was simply looking to become part of a community of like-minded individuals—people who shared my values and goals. I never anticipated how deeply involved I would become, or how much it would shape my personal and professional development. Through various leadership roles, I've learned how to manage teams, communicate effectively, and make decisions. These experiences not only helped me grow as a leader, but also taught me a lot about myself—my strengths, my areas for improvement, and my potential. What started as a social and community-based decision ended up becoming one of the most valuable stepping stones in my journey toward a successful career. (Ethan Bush, Phi Delta Theta)

The mentorship I received from older brothers helped me grow in ways I didn't expect personally, academically, and as a leader. (Angel Salazar, Nu Alpha Kappa Fraternity, Inc.)

Frequently Asked Questions

What does it mean to join a fraternity sorority at Colorado State University?

To make the decision to join a fraternity/sorority at Colorado State University is to make a commitment to better yourself and your community. Being involved as a fraternity/sorority member has the benefit of making a campus with thousands of students seem smaller, and the connections shared by our membership offer a home away from home. Joining an organization can also open many doors to other opportunities such as potential leadership, connection to values driven experiences, mentorship, and more!

What makes one fraternity/sorority different from another, and how do I choose one?

Our fraternities and sororities are multifaceted in membership and structurally each one looks for members that are committed to the values and ideals of their organization. Some organizations offer specific experiential connections—areas of study, religious beliefs, and cultural affinity to name a few—and it is important to consider each organization and the way they recruit new members as you explore the community. All students are encouraged to fully explore the breadth of fraternity and sorority chapters to better understand organizational values, structures, and opportunities to identify an organization that is a good fit.

How will fraternity and sorority life benefit me after college?

One of the benefits of fraternity and sorority membership is the professional and personal development opportunities that exist to help members cultivate important skills useful throughout one's life. Fraternities and sororities can also provide access to a large alumni network that proves beneficial during and after college. Fraternities and sororities provide a learning laboratory for members to practice skills needed for whatever path a student chooses after college. Opportunities include holding leadership positions, developing networking skills, and participating in enriching personal experiences that provide opportunities for personal reflection and meaning making.

What are the requirements to join?

Each organization has different criteria for membership that always includes a GPA or academic expectation. Some organizations require students to be beyond their first semester as a student. We encourage students interested in joining to ask questions about membership eligibility as well as expectations for membership when they explore joining an organization.
